

MOVEMENT IN BEHALF OF WOMAN IN SIBERIA

"Little Grandmother of the Russian Revolution" Subject of Friend's Appeal.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Michael Smirnov, who has just arrived in this city after escaping from Siberia, last night started a movement to arouse sentiment here in favor of Catherine Breshkovskaya, seventy-two years old, known as the "little grandmother of the Russian revolution," who has been sentenced to perpetual exile.

Smirnov took part in the attempt to take Mrs. Breshkovskaya out of Siberia, and was an exile with Mrs. Breshkovskaya. He says he was one of the group that planned the escape of the famous woman revolutionist and acted as a sort of advance agent, going ahead on the route the party must take and arranging in various frontier towns for hiding places in case the alarm was given.

He was successful in his part of the plan and arrived safely at Irkutsk. While waiting for the arrival of Mrs. Breshkovskaya, he learned that she had been captured. Then he decided to escape himself. He reached San Francisco two weeks ago.

Hundred Persons Arrested.

The Russian government, Smirnov explained last night, has made an important case of the attempted escape and the persons who have been arrested and thrown into prison in connection with it. The revolutionists fear that Mrs. Breshkovskaya and all who assisted her will be severely punished unless sentiment can be aroused in the United States which will lead to corresponding escape in Russia and finally end in the commutation of the sentence passed on the aged woman exile.

Smirnov is planning mass meetings in various large cities and has already organized women's organizations in this city. A meeting will be held soon in Carnegie Hall.

DESIRE TO CHANGE BILL IS DEVELOPED IN DEBATE

Smith Measure for Regulation of Cotton Exchanges Likely to Be Amended in Senate.

Debate on the Smith cotton exchange regulation bill in the Senate yesterday afternoon indicated that the measure would be radically amended before its passage. Senate leaders said that while prohibition of use of the mail to members of exchanges dealing in futures for other than actual delivery would be retained in the bill the section probably would be changed to make it apply only to matters directly relating to future contracts.

Urging his amendments, broadening the terms of the bill, Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia declared that the so-called Patten cotton pool was a patriotic enterprise entered into for the purpose of freeing those engaged in the legitimate business of trading in cotton from the evil influence of the New York Cotton Exchange. The men who formed that pool, he said, deserved commendation, not indictment, as has been their fate.

Defends Legitimate "Futures."

Senator Randall defended legitimate future trading as the only means by which specific contracts for spot cotton between manufacturers and merchants could be made. The operation of "hoarding" in the future market was a system of insurance and a benefit to the cotton industry, he argued.

"There are evils here that should be remedied," he added, "but we must not destroy the patient in attempting to cure the disease."

The bill and all of the substitutes and amendments under consideration would provide for the adoption by all cotton exchanges of the government standard in grading. In regulating future contracts it is proposed that the actual commercial difference in value between the grade delivered and that called for in the "milling basis" provision of such contracts shall be the basis of settlement.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to the grandmothers' time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant. Agent, O'Donnell's Drug Store.

SIMPLICITY IS URGED IN CLOSING EXERCISES

Indiana Public School Head Also Opposes Student Secret Societies.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 27.—A plea for simplicity in the commencement exercises of the public schools of Indiana and the eradication of secret societies is made in a statement issued today by Charles A. Greathouse, state superintendent of public instruction.

"The closing exercises of the year celebrating the completion of certain outlined courses of study," the statement reads, "have grown to be almost a 'white elephant' all over the country. From the simple presentation of a certificate, graduation events have assumed such proportions as to cover almost an entire week of festivities, each one of which is in itself, perhaps, entirely appropriate were it not for the fact that it carries with it a vast expenditure of money."

"It is not the work of school boards, superintendents or teachers to legislate against these things. It is the work of the boys and girls who participate and in whom a sentiment for the preservation of the true high school spirit must be created. School exercises, simplicity in dress, with no parade of costly gifts and other non-essentials, should characterize commencement exercises in all public schools."

In speaking of the secret societies and fraternities, Mr. Greathouse said:

"Secret societies, under whatever guises, have no place in the public schools, where nothing that savors of class distinction should find place. Our public schools are the most democratic institutions we have. They differ from private schools, from colleges and universities in their spirit and intent, and the practice of bringing into them the necessary accompanying customs of such institutions makes a sort of hybrid that is difficult to describe and define."

JUST HUMAN NATURE

By Philander Johnson

THE editor of the Shucksburg Banner says that the best little epigram he wrote last week was "Received Payment," on a bill for subscription.

Very few men deceive their wives. A great many imagine they do.

"I'm looking for an honest man," the cynic scornfully declared. But those constructed on that plan were working and could not be spared.

Miss Pansy Pyett's father is worried about his health. Pansy and her mother have arranged a lovely travel program, and he feels that a funeral would upset everything.

The desire to give advice arises more frequently from a natural gift of eloquence than from knowledge or experience.

If anything should happen that might make my country feel a pressing need for hearts of oak combined with nerves of steel, I hope that I'll be sitting where I've often sat before and hear the call of duty sound in Ezra Catlin's store. It's there I've seen a patriot stand and battle by the hour, defying every foe with wondrous eloquence and power. Their eyes would often brighten as some story would unfold of the brave and glorious spirit that prevailed in days of old. But the only call to duty that went through us with a thrill was a summons from a woman, most emphatically shrill: "Jed Tunkins! You come home an' keep this apple butter stirred!" Jed straightens up and marches out and never says a word. And one by one the horses answer up to duty's call. The store is "most deserted, as the twilight shadows fall; they are bravely chopping kindling, feeding ducks or milking cows or comforting the children that begin to fret and drowse, and doing lots of little things that seem undignified, because they love their homes enough to sacrifice their pride. They haven't any uniforms; they haven't any hand. But if ever they are needed you can bet they'll be on hand. They will answer uncompromising, as they've often done before, if the nation's call of duty sounds in Ezra Catlin's store."

To Organize Helps for Rural South.

Social, economic and educational forces in the United States are to be organized in the rural south at the conference for education in the south at Louisville, Ky., April 7 to 10, if plans now being made are followed. It is planned to enlist farmers, business men, women of the country, preachers, doctors, editors and school workers in the new organization.

Odd Finds of the CAMERA

TREE MAJESTY.

A true monarch by the grace of God, this monster tree of Mexico looks behind the history of our race, past all the vicissitudes of our people's records, to a youthful, sapling time of more than 4,000 years ago. Countless types of life have arisen, blossomed a few short hours in the sunshine, faded, and their memories have vanished from the earth, since the seed of this mighty giant first forced its leaflets through the soil. Serenely unconcerned of the decay all around it, impressive in its 124 feet of girth, the monarch stands, surviving even the traditions of its youth.

CHANNEL BUOY PICKED UP. Red Spar Had Drifted From Point Above Highway Bridge.

Under orders from the office of Inspector Ruland, in charge of lights and buoys on Chesapeake bay and its tributaries, Capt. A. J. Taylor, with the tug D. M. Key, yesterday went to the railroad bridge over the Georgetown channel and picked up the red spar buoy which had drifted down from above the highway bridge and took it to the lighthouse service depot, at the foot of G street south-west.

It was found that the buoy had broken loose from the anchor that held it in position, and, drifting down with the ice and current, a short chain left hanging on the spar caught in the piers of the old Long bridge and held it.

The tug had but little difficulty in freeing it and taking it to the depot. Later, it is stated, it will be fitted with a new anchor, and on the next visit of a buoy boat to this city will be returned to position. With the exception of this buoy, it is stated, all the channel marks in the vicinity of this city are in proper position.

MODEL LIABILITY LAW FOR CANAL EMPLOYEES

President Wilson Issues Executive Order Placing System in Operation.

What may be regarded as a model employer's liability law is embodied in an executive order just issued, providing for the adjustment of claims arising out of personal injuries to employees on the Panama canal and the Panama railroad.

This new order is the result of more than a year of patient study of the subject by Secretary Garrison, Maj. P. C. Rogers, chief of the office of the canal commission, and law officers of the War Department. It is based upon an order relating to the same subject originally issued by President Taft March 3, 1913.

Original Order Withdrawn.

For lack of funds it was found necessary to withdraw that original order, which was also regarded as defective in practical features. The new order, while framed with special reference to the conditions in the Canal Zone, is believed to be sufficiently comprehensive to serve as a pattern for legislative action looking to the protection of employees in the various states.

No benefits are to be paid to an employee or his representatives if his injury or death is the result of his own "intention" or his "intention" to injure some other employee, nor if it were brought about by his own intoxication. The total amount of compensation in case of death resulting in one year from the date of injury may not exceed $5,000.

Payments for Eight Years.

A widow may receive 25 per cent of the wage of her former husband for a period of eight years. If she has two dependent children there shall be allowed in addition 10 per cent for each child.

Permanent total disability is to be compensated at the rate of 75 per cent of the monthly pay for the first three months and 50 per cent thereafter for a period of eight years. For temporary disability the compensation is 75 per cent for three months and 50 per cent for periods varying from two to thirteen months.

The water stream brings about a gradual, uniform cooling of the journal and the brass. With the accomplishment of the cooling, the thermostatic bar contracts, diminishing the flow of water until, when the box is at normal temperature, the flow stops.

During recent tests, the efficiency of this cooler was demonstrated. After a run of ninety-one miles a cooler was applied to a journal in which the oil was boiling and splashing. The cooler contained seven gallons of water. At a stop forty-one miles further on the journal was shown to be cooling, while at the next stop, twenty-two miles further, the box had been cooled to almost normal temperature. Nine quarts of water were used in a run of 281 miles.

Water Coolers for Journals.

An invention designed to overcome much of the unnecessary train delay is the water cooler for journals. The hours lost on railway schedules owing to overheated, blazing journal boxes mount into startlingly high figures of wasted time. Today, when a life's work depends for its successful completion upon the conservation of these hours, often even of minutes, any invention which tends toward the diminishing of useless delays strengthens the attack of each individual worker.

The cooler consists of a tank which is clamped upon the journal box, a nozzle for the spraying of the cooling stream of water and a thermostatic valve for the spray control. The nozzle is inserted on the rising side of the journal so that the water will tend to be carried up under the brass. When the journal becomes hot,
